

Athens

The deportation list from Athens is far from complete. The difficulties inherent in compiling this list are reflective of the situation of Jews living in Athens during the Occupation and the changes that took place in the capital city in the 1920's. Pre-WWII Athens was overshadowed by Salonika as a major center of Jewish presence and it was not until the exchange of populations in 1922/23<sup>1</sup> that the Jewish community of Athens would begin to grow. Jewish presence in Athens predated Christianity but due to an unstable political environment and lack of substantial commerce it was not until 1885 that the Jewish community was legally established. A synagogue was built in 1904 by Romaniote Jews who had come from Ioannina, seeking economic opportunities that their small city in northwestern Greece did not offer them. The synagogue was dedicated as Etz Hayyim in 1906 but is still affectionately known as the Ioannotiki Synagogue. A second synagogue, Beth Shalom, was built in the 1930s.

From the beginning of the twentieth century, Jews from elsewhere in Greece and from Jewish communities in other parts of Europe would begin to settle in Athens. With the Occupation of Greece in April of 1941 and the establishment of Zones of Occupation by the Germans, Jews would begin to flee from cities in both the Bulgarian and German Zones of Occupation to the relatively safe haven of Athens, in the Italian Zone of Occupation. Many of these Jews were from traditional Spanish-speaking Sephardic backgrounds, their heavily accented Greek easily distinguishing them as Jews.

Ackos family in Athens

With the capitulation of Mussolini in September of 1943, Athens, formally under the protection of the Italians, was taken over by the Germans. Jews began to seek sanctuary with Christian neighbors, many receiving false IDs with Christian names. The indigenous Greek-speaking (Romaniote) Jews of the city were at an advantage. Their Greek was unaccented and they had established relationships with Christians in the city, many of whom found them safe havens. To the credit of Christian Athenians, many of whom were actively involved in the Resistance movement, of the estimated 3500 Jews living in the city in 1940, less than half (an estimated 1690) were deported. Both Greek-speaking Romaniote and Spanish-speaking Sephardic Jews would be saved from the deportations due to the efforts of Archbishop Damaskenos and Chief of Police Angelos Evert.

The Chief Rabbi of Athens, Elias Barzilai, when asked by the Germans to present the register of the Jews, destroyed the list, making it more difficult for the Germans to discover Jewish residences. Using deception, the Germans lured Jews into Beth Shalom Synagogue on March 24th, 1944, offering free matzoth for Pessach. Mostly men who had come to register, as was required by the Germans to receive the matzoth, many were joined by their wives and children when it was discovered what had happened. They would be loaded onto trucks and taken to a nearby military base converted into a detention camp in Haidari. They would be kept there for a number of days before being loaded into cattlecars and sent to Auschwitz-Birkenau. Their transport would arrive on April 11, 1944, as would the transports carrying the Jews from Ioannina, Arta, Volos, Preveza, Chalkis, Patras, Trikala, Larissa and Kastoria. Between March 24th of 1944 and July of 1944, other Jews would be rounded up in Athens and sent to Haidari. Some would accompany the Jews of Corfu to Auschwitz-Birkenau. Others would share the fate of the Jews of Rhodes. There are additional entries of Jews who were born in Athens but were deported from elsewhere in Europe, many transplanted to Belgium and France, seeking a better life for themselves and their children.

The destruction of the register of the Jews of Athens saved many Jews. It also makes it more difficult to compile a list of Jews who were deported. The Museum Director of Kehila Kedosha Janina, Marcia Haddad Ikonomopoulos, has been working for over a decade, attempting to compile a list of Jews who were deported from Athens to their deaths in the Spring and early Summer of 1944. As seen by the data that follows, the Athens Jewish Community in 1944 was a microcosm of Jewish life in the Eastern Mediterranean; indigenous Greek-speaking Jews, Spanish Jews who came from Turkey, Yugoslavia and major centers of Sephardic life in Greece (Salonika, Drama, Komotini, Kavala, Larissa, Volos, etc.) There were also Romaniote Jews who had their origins elsewhere in Greece (Arta, Preveza, Corfu, Crete and Chalkis) and would leave their families behind to come to Athens to seek their fortunes. They would be briefly reunited with their relatives in Auschwitz-Birkenau as they awaited their imminent deaths.

<sup>9</sup> Obvious error. Unfortunately Yad Vashem does not correct obvious errors. There are no Athens archives to cross-reference. Volunteers took testimonies, often using Hebrew, a language the survivors may or may not have been familiar with. Considering how traumatic it was to give the information on family members who were lost in the Holocaust, we can understand the mistakes made. It would have been wise to have people familiar with the survivor's native language and certainly with the Holocaust. There were no transports of Jews from Greece to the camps before 1943. Simple knowledge of this would have enabled the interviewer to gently correct the survivor.

<sup>14</sup> It is interesting that a number of individuals who were deported from Athens were listed on the list of victims from Austria and were, obviously, not exterminated immediately upon arrival in the camp of Auschwitz. It might have been that they were of Austrian descent (all are listed as speaking German) but might have claimed Turkish citizenship.
